

BRIDGE JUMPER WAS A NEWS?

Young Man Was Envious of Fame of Friend Who Leaped Safely Into East River.

There is a sad and sorrowing old father, a feeble invalid, up on the top floor at No. 426 East Thirteenth street who has no doubt about the identity of the young man who threw his life away Sunday afternoon by leaping from Brooklyn Bridge. The old man is James Nevins, and the tender efforts of his two pretty daughters to dissuade him from the belief that the bridge-jumper was not his only son, his support and the apple of his eye, Walter E. Nevins, are futile.

Walter was twenty years old. He was employed in the Hoe Printing Works as a machinist. He disappeared last Sunday. Among his chums was Robert Witzel, of East Fifteenth street and Avenue A, and who achieved local celebrity three years ago by jumping from the bridge. There was a friendly rivalry between these two friends, and young Nevins had chafed over this superior achievement, especially as "Bob" Witzel taunted him with lacking the courage necessary to make the jump.

Started for Bridge. William Pletschman, another of the bosom friends of Walter Nevins, and living at No. 312 East Thirteenth street, says that Walter left the rest of them in the back room of Kelly's saloon, in Avenue A, Sunday, with the avowed purpose of proving his courage by leaping from the bridge, boarded a passing car before he could stop him, and that he had just about time enough to reach the bridge at the moment when the people on the bridge were started by seeing a young man make the fatal plunge.

"We had been talking about a man's chances in a jump from the bridge," said Pletschman to an Evening World reporter today. "We were all drinking in Kelly's Sunday morning. Nevins was sore at the suggestion that Witzel could do anything he could not do, and declared that he would not take a dare from any man. He broke out of the crowd once and he would do it, and started for the door. But we caught him and brought him back. Bob Witzel dropped in a while after that and the subject of bridge-jumping was brought up again. Suddenly, as a downtown car approached, Walter darted to his feet and ran out, calling back that he was going to do it. We have none of us seen him since."

Father May Die. Walter Nevins lived with his invalid father and two sisters on the top floor of the old-fashioned mansion at No. 426 East Thirteenth street, and of these sisters, Miss Annie, said sadly this morning:

"We have hoped against hope, and although we still try to make our poor father believe that Walter is safe and will come back, I have no doubt that it was Walter who jumped from the bridge last Sunday."

"Walter was wild about feats of daring, and especially the jump from the Brooklyn Bridge. He often talked about it and vowed he would do it. I think it was a good boy and was never away from home over night before. The description published in the Evening World of the jump from the bridge Sunday exactly fits our Walter. I am reluctant to say I don't know what happened to him. He has been crying and groaning as you see him now ever since we read about the bridge-jumper and Walter did not come home."

Victim, Shot in Breast, Is Attending to Business, While Assailant Is in Hospital in Serious Condition.

The West Forty-seventh street police have a remarkable shooting mystery on their hands. The victim of the shooting, Daniel Cahill, is attending to his business at his saloon, on the northwest corner of Tenth avenue and Fifty-fourth street, with a bullet wound in the flesh of his right shoulder, but the shooter lies in Roosevelt Hospital with serious injuries to his spine, internal injuries and many cuts and bruises on his face, though he neither claims nor admits that Cahill did a thing to him.

The man in the hospital says he is Ernest Lucia, a Frenchman, forty-five years old. He refuses to tell where he lives or give any account of the shooting.

Patrolman Keller, of the West Forty-seventh street station, heard a report of a pistol at 2:30 o'clock this morning. He traced it to Cahill's saloon, where he was there, bleeding from a wound in his breast. There was no one else in sight. An ambulance was called and Cahill was taken to Roosevelt Hospital. His wound was superficial, and he returned to the saloon after it was dressed. Meanwhile the policeman had been unable to find his assailant.

At this moment something came fluttering down from the roof of the six-story building. It was a handkerchief saturated with blood. Keller ran up through the house to the roof, arriving in time to see a man jump to the roof of the next house twenty feet lower. His track on the back and did not move afterward.

Keller took his prisoner off the lower roof on his back, and patrol wagon took him to the Roosevelt Hospital. His injuries were found to be serious. First he refused to say anything. Then he said he was Michael Cahill, of No. 66 Bowers. Later he said he was Antonio Lucia, of No. 322 Linden place, Brooklyn. Later still he gave the description of himself given above. The police say even that he is a desperado, but that he is a prosperous builder attempting to escape public exposure of his night's escapade.

"Lucia" said he had $80 when he got on a Brooklyn trolley car to come to Manhattan yesterday afternoon. He met his friend, Michael Cahill, on the car. They drank their way along up Park Row and the Bowery and finally took a car for a call on Cahill, where they spent several hours making dice for the drinks and until the shooting occurred. He says he does not know how it happened.

Cahill says his visitor became too noisy, and he strung him out of the saloon. Then the stranger drew a pistol and shot him.

SOCIETY WOMAN LEAVES THE SHOP FOR THE STAGE.

Mrs. Weston, Sister of De Lancey Nicoll, to Have a Part in "The Climbers."

Mrs. Charlotte Nicoll Weston, well known in society, is going on the stage. She is a sister of former District Attorney De Lancey Nicoll and of Mrs. James Brown Lord. She will come to the theatrical world with a fund of perseverance, for after the death of her husband, Gen. Willoughby Weston, last April, she became a shopgirl to support herself and her children.

Mrs. Weston will begin her stage life next fall after a summer spent in study. She will make her debut as Miss Godesby in "The Climbers," a part in which Mrs. "Jack" Bloodgood now Mrs. Lambie, her preceptors, made her first pronounced success.

"I found the life of a shopgirl hard and monotonous," said Mrs. Weston, "and although I did the best I could, I fear that I was not adapted to it."

"My principal duty was to sell hats. While I was trying to find something else to do I met Miss Bingham. She agreed to give me a part in 'The Climbers,' and I shall make my first appearance in the fall."

Appellate Division Decides That Pawnbroker Wiesenberger Must Serve His Term for Receiving Stolen Goods.

William Wiesenberger, a pawnbroker, convicted in 1900 of receiving stolen goods, must serve two years and six months in prison according to the decision of the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court.

Wiesenberger, who has been out on $12,000 bail pending the decision of the Court, is said to be in Old Mexico. James W. Ridgway, counsel for the pawnbroker, began proceedings today to carry the case to the Court of Appeals. He says that he does not know the present whereabouts of his client, but that his absence will not endanger his bond until a decision has been rendered by the Court.

Wiesenberger kept a pawnshop in Sixth avenue, near Thirty-second street. He was arrested in April, 1900, on the testimony of Henry Hess, a burglar, charged with maintaining a fence. Hess confessed that he had plundered houses on the upper west side and had sold the proceeds to the pawnbroker, the latter being aware that they were stolen.

According to Hess the pawnbroker had in his establishment a melting pot which he had used to melt down the plate stolen from more than one hundred residences west of Central Park.

Wiesenberger was sentenced by the Court of General Sessions to two years and six months in jail and to pay $500 fine. He appealed and the Appellate Division of the Supreme Court sustained the verdict.

Munyon's Witch-Hazel Soap
Keeps mother and baby sweet as roses.

I want every woman who wishes to improve her complexion—who wishes to have her skin soft as velvet—who would like to have her face free from all skin eruptions and facial blemishes—to use my Witch-Hazel Soap. I want every mother to try this soap on baby and see how quickly it will relieve the little one of all hives, baby rash and chafing.

—MUNYON.

SHE DIDN'T LIKE TO MIND THE BABY.

Little Florence Lush Did Like Automobiles and Wine, So She and Mamie Murray Ran Away—Both Arrested.

Florence Lush, fourteen, of Portchester on the Sound, who ran away from home eight days ago because she could not have an automobile and fine dresses, was committed by Judge Dunning, of White Plains, to-day to the custody of Chief of Police Studwell, of Portchester. Florence, who is a very pretty girl, is the daughter of William Lush, a fireman, who is employed on the New York and New Haven Railroad. When she first disappeared her parents believed she had been kidnapped, but it was later learned that she had gone away with Miss Mamie Murray, of Portchester.

The two girls were found by Police-man Daly, of White Plains, drinking wine in a hotel there. They had plenty of money and declared that they were going to travel around the world if their money held out.

Judge Dunning to-day turned them over to the custody of Chief Studwell on warrants issued by Justice Wakefield, of Portchester. The Lush girl is charged by her father with being disorderly, while Miss Murray is wanted for the abduction of Florence.

Here is the story told by Florence: "The story that I was kidnapped is untrue. I simply went away to see the sights. I was tired of living home. I am proud and did not want to do the housework and mind mother's baby. I went to Rye Beach and from there went with Miss Murray to New Rochelle, Mount Vernon, New York and White Plains."

"We came here in style. We hired rooms at Admiral Dot's hotel, and had a jolly time. Recently I went to the home of my aunt in Brooklyn, and had a ride in an automobile. That is what I want. If I was rich I would have horses, carriages, auto and fine dresses. I don't like to stay home, because I want me to water the cows. Now that I am arrested I am willing to go back home and mind mother's baby. Mr. Lush intends to put his daughter in a training school, because he says she is too romantic for a mere child."

"I found the life of a shopgirl hard and monotonous," said Mrs. Weston, "and although I did the best I could, I fear that I was not adapted to it."

"My principal duty was to sell hats. While I was trying to find something else to do I met Miss Bingham. She agreed to give me a part in 'The Climbers,' and I shall make my first appearance in the fall."

PANIC AND BLOCK ON BROOKLYN "L."

Air Brakes Part on Fifth Avenue Line and Frighten Passengers, Delaying Traffic to Manhattan.

Air brakes on a Fifth Avenue "L" train in Brooklyn parted this morning and badly frightened the passengers, blocking the entire line south of Twentieth street for fifteen minutes, and delaying thousands of people on their way to Manhattan.

The train was running into the Twentieth street station, on its way to the Bridge, when the brake tubes became uncoupled between the second and third cars. This threw the brakes on hard on the rear section of the train. It stopped so suddenly that passengers were almost thrown from their seats.

The roar of a passing train on the opposite track and the blowing of the alarm on the rear cars of the stalled train threw the passengers into a panic.

They made a rush for the doors and in the open cars many climbed out through the side rails in their wild haste to reach the station platform.

Workmen were summoned from Thirtieth street to repair the brake tubes. This took about fifteen minutes, and by that time a long line of trains were stalled on the downtown tracks.

MAGISTRATE MEADE IS ILL.
His Physician Says that His Condition Is Not Serious.

It was said at the home of Magistrate Meade that the severe hot weather had brought on a return attack of diabetes, from which he has been a sufferer for about two years. His doctor thought that with rest he would be soon around again. Magistrate Meade, it was said, is not dangerously ill, and is improving.

"I found the life of a shopgirl hard and monotonous," said Mrs. Weston, "and although I did the best I could, I fear that I was not adapted to it."

"My principal duty was to sell hats. While I was trying to find something else to do I met Miss Bingham. She agreed to give me a part in 'The Climbers,' and I shall make my first appearance in the fall."
